

Becoming Ecological

Making Space for Red Bead Speech

Facilitated by
Giles Barrow & Hayley Marshall

A year programme of four 3-day workshops tracking the seasons aimed at human relations practitioners seeking to develop their work with clients across all fields of application and theoretical modalities. The purpose of the programme is to deepen personal and collective ecological conversations, thereby building confidence for working within the ecological domain. The workshops will follow the general direction of our previous Shining Mill Group and will alternate between Mill House, Suffolk, and Shining Cliff Wood, Belper. We aim to work exclusively outdoors in these places incorporating the wisdom of our more-than-human kin.

The format of the programme will incorporate some of our existing signature themes including exploration of nonverbal implicit process through movement, storytelling, rite of passage, and outdoor immersion; linked with fireside teachings, and discussion. In addition, this new programme will feature the theory, methodology and practice of leading thinkers in the ecological field. Details of selected theorists/writers will be released nearer the time. The emphasis is on widening the horizon from which the programme draws material to foster rooted new practices.
